

PROFILE

The Institut d'Administration des Entreprises (IAE) is the business school of the Université de Nice Sophia Antipolis. The IAE was established by MEDEF 45 years ago to meet the needs of businesses for well-trained new hires and for mid-career and in-service training. Since then the IAE has grown steadily, always with eyes and ears trained on the evolution of the labor market.

Numerous partnerships with firms, professional organizations (such as the French associations of certified public accountants, auditors, finance directors, management controllers, and foreign trade advisers), and foreign universities (San Francisco State University, Siena, Turin, Nuremberg, Danang, Hanoi, New Delhi, and more), coupled with the close involvement of practicing professionals in the curriculum, ensure that students enjoy opportunities tailored to their individual interests and talents.

Major fields of study

The IAE admits students who have completed 2 years of successful postsecondary study. Programs are offered in four major areas:

- Accounting, auditing, and control, leading to the accounting professions: certified public accountant, auditor.
- Finance, leading to the professions of financial management, management control, and internal audits.
- Marketing and management, for future market analysts, brand managers, communication directors, and so on.
- International studies, to prepare students for careers in international trade and for MBA programs in finance, marketing, or management.

Research

The IAE's educational programs draw on the resources of CRIFP, a research center specializing in research on the creation of value (both real and financial).

The center serves research faculty from the Université de Nice Sophia Antipolis, the Université de Toulon, and the Université de Corte, all members of the Euro-Mediterranean higher education and research cluster. Other partners are expected to join in the coming year, among them the universities of Genoa and Turin.
